Missouri	Sections 454.1000 to 454.1029, RSMo, provide the authority for the Family Support Division (FSD) or the court to suspend licenses. A driver's license may be suspended by FSD or by the court when: an obligor is not making child support payments in accordance with the order and owes at least 2,500 in past-due child or spousal support or owes at least 3 months of current or spousal support, whichever is less; an obligor did not enter into a payment agreement or is not complying with a previous payment agreement; or the obligor does not have employment or other income for which income withholding can be completed. The obligor has 60 days from the date the notice is served to pay arrears in full, enter into or comply with a payment plan, or request a hearing before the court or director.
Montana	No response available.
Nebraska	A noncustodial parent's license may be suspended when they are delinquent in an amount equal to the support due for more than a three-month period (this does not include the current monthly support). The noncustodial has a verified address, there is not an active Chapter 13 bankruptcy, and the noncustodial parent has not requested a review and modification that is in process. In low income or hardship cases, the financial circumstances of a noncustodial parent may be reviewed on a case-by-case basis and determine if license suspension is appropriate, or if entering into a payment plan agreement, adjust the payment to a lower amount. Please Note: Nebraska has a tier license suspension process (driver's license, recreational, professional/occupational). Only one type of license can be suspended at a time and must be done in a specific order. If the noncustodial parent has a valid commercial driver's license (CDL) or a restricted commercial driver's license (RCDL), Nebraska law requires that the driver's license be skipped, and the process begin with the recreational license.

North Dakota	Judicial - noncustodial parent owes past-due support in an amount greater than three times the current support obligation and is not current in a court-ordered repayment plan or fails to comply with a subpoena relating to a paternity or child support matter. Administrative - 1) noncustodial parent owes past-due support in an amount greater than two times the current or most recent monthly support obligation or $2,000 whichever is less; 2) fails to comply with a payment plan negotiated with Child Support; or 3) fails to comply with a subpoena relating to a paternity or child support matter.
Ohio	No response available.
Oklahoma	No response available.
Oregon	Oregon may begin the license suspension process when support arrears reach the greater of three months of support or $2,500 and the paying parent has not made payments for the last three months greater than the current support amount or, if there is no longer an order or judgment for current support, equal to the amount of the most recent order for current support. This criterion does not apply to payments resulting from garnishment, tax offset, or any other enforcement action other than income withholding. The paying parent may stop that process by paying the arrears below the threshold or by entering into and complying with the terms of an agreement. See ORS 25.750-785 and OAR 137-055-4420.
